“The best things about being a Sixth Form student are not having to wear a uniform and study periods.”

I study Psychology, Computer Science and Ethics & Philosophy. I chose to stay on a St Thomas More because it would be less stressful than moving schools at such an important time in your education. Plus I already knew most of the teachers and a lot of my friends were staying.

The best things about being a Sixth Form student are not having to wear a uniform and study periods. In your study periods you can choose to do work, but you can also choose to work in your own time and spend some of your study lessons socialising with your friends either inside or outside. This is a luxury and a freedom that you don't get in main school. If you do choose to work, the Sixth Form library is a great environment for getting things done.

Lessons are quite different to main school, usually with smaller classes, allowing teachers to get to know you and help you more with your own particular style of learning. The relationship you have with teachers is more personal and supportive, and I feel this really helps me to do well.

On a Wednesday afternoon, I do Art for Enrichment, which is a great relaxation in the middle of the week. This choice allows me to spend some time drawing and creating, with is a freedom that you don't get lower down the school.
